

Fancourt's Manor House wins Johansens' Best Newcomer

The Manor House Boutique Hotel, situated on the Fancourt Estate – in South Africa's famous Garden Route – has been awarded the coveted Condé Nast Johansens's Best Newcomer in Africa 2018.

From the publishers of Vogue, GQ, Travellers and Glamour, Condé Nast Johansens, is a leading luxury guide for discerning independent travellers. The global awards were created to acknowledge, reward and celebrate excellence across their hospitality collection. The annual Condé Nast Johansens Awards for Excellence are a trusted mark of quality, recognised by luxury consumers and travel professionals alike.

“We could not be more thrilled by this recognition from the highly respected Condé Nast Johansens,” said Peter Dros, Director of Sales and Marketing at Fancourt. “The Manor House is a premier locale in South Africa, and we look forward to sharing all that the hotel has to offer with our current and future guests.”

Located near the charming South African town of George, Fancourt's opulent gem, The Manor House originally built in 1859 has 18 uniquely decorated suites, a private pool, garden and library; as well as unique services including butler service and return airport transfers. Representing the past in its architecture, this romantic boutique hotel is equipped with modern amenities and boasts a lustrous and elegant style, making it an ideal contemporary retreat on the Fancourt estate.
